Program Would Increase Home Health Care

In keeping with its Annual Implementation Plan, the Southwest Virginia Health Systems Agency, with its principal office in Blacksburg, has announced that it will request the State Health Department, the Governor and State legislators to increase its delivery of home health services. In an effort to call public attention to the benefits of providing convalescent care in the home, the HSA has agreed to a specific work program for the entire Southwest Virginia area. The program will be carried out with built-in evaluations over the next two (2) years by volunteers and staff persons who reside in the seven (7) health service areas. They in turn will call on the appropriate organizations and institutions to give full support to home health care.

Already set in motion is a quarterly review of statistics provided by: the health department; proprietary home health agencies (Upjohn Health Care Services, Western Medical); and Friendship Manor, a non-profit service in Roanoke; on the utilization level in each health planning area; staffing patterns, and salary patterns for home care staff. The HSA is asking third party payors to revise existing reimbursement programs to include a full range of home health services. A Blue Cross/Blue Shield representative of Southwest Virginia has indicated that such coverage is in the planning stage and will be available by early 1980.

Presently, under Medicare/Medicaid part A coverage, a patient has to be hospitalized three (3) days before referral to a home health program. A terminally ill person is limited to one hundred (100) home health visits, and a patient must have a skilled health care need. In addition to calling for a revision in these areas, the HSA's Home Health/Nursing Home Technical Advisory Panel sees a need to modify the lengthy paper work, which some authorities say accounts for approximately 50% of the cost of the home care services.

Other problems which restrict the use of home health services is the lack of referrals from physicians. The Technical Panel has called for a strong educational campaign with special emphasis on physician education to increase the use of this service. The discharge planner in hospitals can play a major role in assisting a physician in knowing what is available in the community and how one enters the system," commented Mrs. June Poe, Chairperson of HSA's Technical Advisory Panel. Mrs. Poe is Director of Advocacy Services for the League of Older Americans in Roanoke. "A Mandate to every area agency in Virginia requires that a significant portion of their funds be spent for home delivered care," continued Mrs. Poe. "We know that older persons prefer to be maintained in their own homes. In many cases with well managed part-time community support, this is possible and less costly."

A study Committee in Central Virginia on Home Health was organized two years ago where a number of the recommendations in the Plan originated. This local group will be reactivated and join regional forces to implement the goals.

"Our effort over the past two years has been to get a stronger referral system built into the delivery of home health services," added Mrs. Ann Reid, HSA Health Planner in Lynchburg. The hospitals in Lynchburg and Bedford have worked closely with physicians who decide the needs of patients and how they can be cared for after discharge from the hospital. Central Virginia's home care services are provided through the Public Health Department; (Telephone: 528-6777, Mrs. Willie Young) and Upjohn HealthCare Services; (Telephone: 846-5219, Mrs. Jane Bollinger).

HOSPITAL TO MAKE MOVE

hospital will offer physicians one of the most modern rural medical facilities in the state and that, according to Thompson, would be most beneficial to the community and the community-owned hospital.

"We're trying to attract doctors. The community needs more practicing physicians," Thompson said, again referring to the wide area served by the medical facility.

Other Innovations

Other innovations the new patient tower complex will have include braille on informational signs, in elevators, and where ever blind patrons may need directional help; two emergency generators that are capable of sustaining the hospital's essential electrical systems during power outages; conference rooms; an eight room pediatric section; four isolation rooms (two on each floor); and a number of doctors', nurses', staff, and visitors' lounges.

Southside Community Hospital has two primary functions, Thompson noted. They are patient care and continuing education. With the new structure virtually creating a new hospital altogether, those functions will be even better, he surmised.

"The new patient tower," he concluded, "was designed for efficiency, patient comfort and improved services."

Gifts Are A Must!

If you are invited to the wedding and the reception, a bridal gift is a "must", most social arbiters agree.

And when the wedding is small or, for other good reasons, all friends cannot be invited, it is still a lovely gesture to send a present," says Letitia Baldridge, who recently revised and expanded THE AMY VANDERBILT COMPLETE BOOK OF ETIQUETTE published by Doubleday.

Newlyweds need almost everything, but the gifts they most appreciate are those which they would not purchase if not received from friends and relatives.

Many young people want fine table appointments. Silver flatware and holloware, fine china and crystal are still the most eagerly anticipated wedding gifts.

One reason is that dining and entertaining are important facets of today's lifestyle. In addition most of us take pride in the ownership of beautiful things.

When in doubt, choose something of quality. Quality is available at almost any price level.

People today recognize quality. It is inherent in design and craftmanship of desirable gifts.

The very best bridal gifts are those which endure. Many choices of today may be the heirlooms of tomorrow.
